

Volume 12, Issue 38: It's Not Too Late

I read this question from a post James Clear, the author of Atomic Habits posted a couple of days ago. "There is one month left in the year. Most people are ready to coast to the finish line, but one good month can make the whole year feel like a success. What can you do in the next 30 days to build momentum and finish the year on a high note?"

It's not too late to turn the tide. It's not too late to put your best foot forward. It's not too late to bring the best version of yourself to the game. It's not too late to go after a goal you thought you couldn't attain.

It's not too late to build a new identity. It helps to finish the year on a higher note, and with a new identity. It would give you morale to start strong in the new year. So, what can you do in the remaining 16 days to build momentum and finish the year on a high note? It's not too late to turn the tide.
